This icebreaker allows people to mingle and is a fun way for people to get to know one another.

1. Write a famous person's name on each 3x5 card and tape it to the back of each person as he or she arrives.
  - Examples of people who can be used include Tom Cruise, the Tooth Fairy, Al Gore, Barbara Walters, Hillary Clinton, or the Abominable Snowman.
2. Each person then circulates around the room and asks each person one YES or NO question to determine who the famous person is listed on his or her card.
3. After each question the person tries to guess the identity of the person written on the card.
4. When the person guesses correctly, the card is move to his or her chest and they become a "consultant" to the other people who have not solved the identity of the person listed on their card.

Select people appropriate in age for the card. For example, don't select Joe DiMaggio or Frank Sinatra if participants are twenty years old.

VARIATION

- Use Post-it notes instead of 3 x 5 cards and place them on people's foreheads rather than their backs.
